Editorial:

The Sabha has finally acquired a property to build Queensland Vedic Cultural Centre in very centrally located area in Brisbane. There has been a huge support of the members and well-wishers for this project. Members and youths have worked very hard to carry out renovations at the center. This support is always required to meet our goal of building Community Hall.

Arya Samajs 's big land purchase for Community Hall

For many years now Arya Pratinidhi Sabha of Queensland has been investing time and effort in chasing for a centrally located property and finally their efforts have been rewarded. Situated in a incredibly peaceful setting very well located at 198 Learoyd Road, Willawong/ Acacia Ridge the acreage property is a site to progress a big budget, much needed infrastructure project of a multi-purpose community hall to seat 500 people as well as constructing a residential facility. Recognising that with an increased population in Queensland comes increased pressure on community infrastructure and with scarcity of good community halls thus the motivation to buy the property and build the community centre. This property purchase is truly an affirmation of our true commitment to move our community forward to nation building and elevate the lives of all our people.

The multipurpose hall will be able to cater for a wide variety of functions, such as Havan Yaj, Weddings, Community meetings, Seminars, Training events, Library, Receptions, Concerts, Fitness classes, Recreational activities, Art classes etc. The centre will be utilized to promote Vedic teachings, Yoga, Meditation, Hindi, Indian culture, Languages, Traditions and Music. The provision of this infrastructure provides a broader community benefit as well as it will be utilised by various organisations and individuals. Our organisation has come a long way and has made a significant contribution to larger Indian community by promoting Vedic teachings, Indian culture, language and has involved younger generation in activities such as yoga, music, community, charity work etc. and providing unwavering support for a culturally diverse multicultural community. The purpose of the centre will be to provide spaces where the community can run special events properly, attend regular activities and utilise services and to ensure the facility is around for our future generations. With a residential house and a Yajshala currently on the property APSQ conducts regular Havan Yaj Satsang programme on every Sunday from 2pm.

It was very heartening to note the endorsement of the proposed project from the wider Brisbane and Queensland community and we anticipate their continued assistance to accomplish this significant development for various community organisations and individuals.

EVOLUTIONARY PROCESS

It has become a saying that there has always been a growth, a development or an evolution in every sphere of life. T. Burrow, for instance, says in 'Sanskrit Language' (Page 40) "Many of the changes of meaning occurred in the natural 'growth of the language.'"

A.B. Keith has also used the word 'Development', saying, "From the language of the Rigveda one can trace a steady 'development' of classical Sanskrit." (History of Sanskrit Literature, P.4)

F. Bopp, father of Comparative Philology in 'Comparative Grammar of Sanskrit, Greek, Latin and other Languages, Vol.1 has used the word 'Development' in this context at page 4—"Language in its stages of being and March of development."

Some Indian philologists also who have followed western writers indiscreetly, have held the same view.

Evolution refuted when we compare the most ancient archaic Vedic language with the modern classical Sanskrit, we find that the platitude is false and instead of 'growth' or 'development' there has been decay.

For instance —

(1) In the Vedic Leseicon (Nighantu) we have 57 synonyms of 'Vach' (speech) of which very few have survived in classical Sanskrit.

(2) Out of 101 names for water in Vedic Sanskrit only 27 remain in classical Sanskrit.

(3) There are 37 names for 'Megha' (cloud) in Vedic Sanskrit, but only 15 are to be found in classical Sanskrit.

(4) And out of 26 synonyms of 'Karma' in Vedic Sanskrit only 2 are left in classical Sanskrit.

It is gratifying to note that some distinguished western Indologists are also opposed to this theory of growth or evolution of language. As for instance—

1. Sir William Jones says: "The Sanskrit language, whatever be its antiquity, is of a wonderful structure more perfect than Greek, more copious than Latin and more exquisitely refined than Spanish or French.

2. Maxmuller, no great friend of India, says: 'They have reduced the rich and powerful idiom of the poets of the Veda to the inadequate and impure jargon of the modern sepoy (soldier of Indian origin).'" (Lectures on the Science of Language, Vol.Ip.36)

Again on page 48 writes: 'We are accustomed to call those changes 'growth' of language, but it would be more appropriate to
